INTRODUCTION

The story of Appalachian State University 1973 begins in the pages of this book.

Where the images of pictures and words end your memory begins. Within your mind is the true recollection of 1973. Relish the taste of memories, let your mind wander, remember your important moments.

Success, friendship, joy, hypocrisy, artificiality, pretense, good and bad combine to create true experience. Relive those experiences.

The mind which searches the past reveals ones today and tomorrow, not simply the past. The how and why a person is, and what he shall be.

*to change
to grow to be*

We are all in a transitory state of "be"ing. Reflections of the past experience can not return us to our former selves, but it does serve to remind us why we are.

Enjoy yourselves!

UNIVERSITY MARCHING BAND

"... Now we proudly present - North Carolina's Band of Distinction!" And the strains of "Hi Hi Yikas" were heard as the 96-piece ASU Marching Band performed during the football season. These talented musicians certainly showed their pride in being a part of Appalachian State as they performed at pep rallies, every home game, and at three away games.

The band began summer marching practice August 31 until the first day of fall classes. During this special session, veterans of the band oriented the freshman and other new band members. During fall quarter, rehearsals were four hours a week, but residents in nearby dorms around Conrad Stadium can testify to the fact that there were many Friday night and Saturday rehearsals as well.

The band had only one week to prepare a new halftime show for each game, under the field direction of drum major John Alexander. Mr. Joe "Coach" Phelps, the band director, worked out the shows given by the band. Louis Armstrong was the feature in one show, and the band made the formation of a trumpet, along with playing some familiar jazz tunes of Sachmo's time. They marched the Homecoming parade and performed. They also took part on R.O.T.C. Day and Band Day when bands from all over the state were presented at halftime. But the show they performed at the game with the University of South Carolina was perhaps the most exciting for the band. Doing a dance routine that won them a standing ovation from the great crowd, they performed without a flaw. Even South Carolina's 250-piece band could not match up to the marching Mountaineers' brilliant maneuvering and style. An exiting day for the marching band was when they went to Raleigh on January 5 of this year for the inaugural parade for North Carolina's new governor Jim Holshouser.

Along with the end of football season came the end to another marching season, but not the end to Mountaineer band spirit and support. During the basketball season, the ASU Pep Band, decked out in flannel shirts and overalls, kept the spirits of the crowds in Varsity Gym rising. The pep band seemed to enjoy participating, and Miss Rosie Turner did a fine job of directing.

The ASU Marching band and pep band are bands the students at this school are proud of. They worked hard this year and have become one of North Carolina's best marching bands. It is no wonder this growing organization is called "North Carolina's Band of Distinction."

I believe that each person who leaves Appalachian leaves something very worthwhile behind - friends, experiences or ideas. In return, we take much from our university - new knowledge and beliefs, friends we will never forget, experiences we will laugh over for years, and ideals that will never die. But most important, we gain a better understanding of people and their ideas.

David Wright

Being selected to Who's Who is the greatest honor I have received here at ASU. Now that my undergraduate years are over, the future becomes of upmost importance. What the future holds for my life is unclear to me at this time. I feel that I should let God guide me in the way that I should go. If my future was known, how miserable I would be today. Richard De Haan said, "One of the kindest things God ever did was to put a curtain over tomorrow." Once I read a short poem by De Haan which explains how I feel about my future.

I will not seek to know the future years
Nor cloud today with dark tomorrow's fears.
I will but ask clear light from Heaven to show
How - step by step - my pilgrimage should go.

The thoughts that come to my mind were given to me by my mother when I first started college.

"To live your life in the world you have to live will require faith and love and courage.

Faith in yourself

Love in your fellowman

Courage to defend both of these. Then you can never be defeated in anything."

Wayne Fonvielle

It was once said that "there are some things more painful than the truth, but I can't think of them." After four years at this institution, I can't think of them either.

Bill Teague

My basic approach to life is learning adaptability. If you take advantage of one opportunity, you open doors for others to come along. Pretty soon, because you happened on the right opportunity, two or three others are opened to you. . . you're able to choose.

I've been somewhat unethical, in the way I've taken advantage of events, as far as conventional outlooks go. It's sort of a "Robin Hood" approach to life: taking from those who don't need...giving to those who do.

As far as this University goes, I would hope that students become more aware of their surroundings. The majority of students at Appalachian aren't affected by the world outside them. If their attitudes and awareness were to change, perhaps the University itself would be more free.

I want to go into theatre because it's an escape...a creative outlet. Comedy, especially, is a medium in which people can escape for one or two hours. If we can learn to laugh at ourselves, the goal of comedy is achieved.

The idea of teaching challenges me. If I can teach one person--really teach him--the whole effort will be worthwhile.

To me, who Appalachian State University is has far more importance than what Appalachian State University is. Ten years from now the people I met at ASU will stick in my mind more than the institution itself. Because, in four years at Appalachian State University I have gained a number of friends who can still be called friends in twenty years. In four years at Appalachian I have discovered a little more about myself. In four years at Appalachian I have found LOVE! What more can any University offer?

Patsy Dull

Here we are, the class of 1973, at the end of four trying, but fun filled years. Everyone's experiences have been different. But, if time could stand still for a few moments and we could look back, what would we recall. Would it be the endless hours spent studying or worrying about grades, or the time spent rapping with friends, who have helped us endure the journey? Maybe we would relive the total experience of college life-- the good times and the bad. Since time can't stand still, however, we all must move on--each to his own kind of life--only to take with us the magic of memory.

Arnold Lovell

I could say all kinds of witty and quaint things about the past four years at Appalachian if I wanted to but I feel looking ahead is a lot more valuable. Whether I get in law school or teach school or whatever, I've got an education which nobody can take away from me, some great friends and a lot of tremendous fraternity brothers. I guess that would be my most rewarding experience, helping to bring fraternities, especially Tau Kappa Epsilon to Appalachian.

Bobbie Stephens

Every student seeking a teaching certificate is confronted with a trying experience, namely student teaching. Additional to the actual instruction and planning responsibilities, the student is faced with the burden of acquiring a residence in a minimal length of time.

Realizing that the student teaching experience is to encompass all aspects of the educational profession, the student, nevertheless, feels that the University should participate actively in assisting with housing accommodations. Assistance should include such things as; short-term leases, utility deposits, appropriate locations, and transportation availabilities. It appears that a suitable rapport between the University and local realators should be established to alleviate unnecessary expenditures. With these factors removed, the student may then devote the entire period to his principal duties.

Margaret Cecil

While doing some assigned reading in high school, I came across the following stanzas which summarize my feelings toward life:

The world stands out on either side
No wider than the heart is wide;
Above the world is stretched the sky,
No higher than the soul is high.
The heart can push the sea and land
Farther away on either hand. . . .
But East and West will pinch the heart
That cannot keep them pushed apart;
And he whose soul is flat- the sky
Will cave in on him by and by.

from "Renaissance" by Edna St. Vincent Millay

During the last four years at Appalachian I have seen many needed changes. To me these changes represent progress. Students are the vital key to this progress. They can retard or spur changes through their determination to have a voice in the changes that affect their life on this campus. The only method of converting this determination into constructive action is through participation. Therefore, I would like to encourage every student at Appalachian to become involved in activities that will further his/her future and the future of the University. Help make Appalachian a place you will be proud of attending.

Plato once said "improvement comes through calamity." The calamity I speak of is that of our health. God has given most of us the gift of good health. Why are we so determined to destroy this health? We wreck our physical environment. We make every effort to ruin our health through the abuse or tolerance of non-prescription drugs, smoke (tobacco, grass, campfires), chemical additives in our food and drinks, alcohol (just another chemical), what we eat and how much, our lack of physical exercise, and many other things. We may never realize our negligence until we develop an incurable disease or have a child born less than perfect. It is really something to think about. If we think logically and look ahead we can prove Plato wrong. Improvement can occur without calamity.

Dwight Simmons

Wilfred T. Frenfull

Martin Luther

In Retrospect to the events of the last four years I would say my experiences might be expressed by the concept of Appalachian State University being a catalyst for development. The student development seen at Appalachian has taken the form of various innovations such as internship programs, independent and individual studies and new techniques for inclass experiences. Through these means this individual has become more aware of his strength's and capabilities as a person. It has further meant the acceptance of personal limitation and weakness. Thus the awareness developed through these concepts by this individual will aide in the fulfillment of his career aspirations.

Rick Ghoens

Appalachian State University has made a step in the direction of providing avenues to break away from the boredom and create the desire to learn. The University has provided educational opportunities outside the classroom where an individual could initiate his own projects which an individual feels will help him in meeting his future goals. These projects help him in meeting his future goals. These projects help the student put the material learned from a classroom into operation, learn to work with people, solve problems and develop skills. One such university organization which provides for the opportunity to gain valuable knowledge and experience without the classroom surrounding is the Internship Department Directed by Dr. Mott Williamson. Even though Appalachian has moved toward the improvement of our educational system, there are many unnecessary requirements which we still have to fulfill. These unnecessary requirements waste time which could be used to improve your knowledge in either your major or other areas a person may desire to take.

Terry Pardew

With graduation ahead and four years behind me, I stop to think of the great amount of knowledge I have paid to acquire. I'm searching for it but I can't find where I placed it. The only thing I have to show for my labors are my memories. Memories of working with Photography Services, Student Government, the Rhododendron, Bowie Hall, Soccer, and the Collegiate Civic Club. I have enjoyed working with these organizations, even when success has had its failures. If I could do it over, I'd get just as involved because this is where I got the foundation of my education. Take my advice, if your given the chance to get involved, grab that chance and run with it. Run hard hurdle high, never taking your eyes off the course. If you look to the side, you'll fall and there will be someone waiting to announce your failure. But don't quit, everyone must run the race to the finish but no one runs a perfect race.

Marie Arrowood

Being named to represent Appalachian State University in the 1973 Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges is a great honor to me. But I will always have other, even greater memories of my past four years in Boone. For instance, this is the land of a free and loving spirit where I have learned the values of mixing joy with sorrow and peace with pain. Above all, I have learned to respect man's individuality. And this knowledge has not come from a textbook or a lecture, but it has come from experiences like my internship at Watauga High School. This is the knowledge of life.

Doug Moore

To my Folks, Thanks for your love, help, and sacrifices; I may never be able to return as much but I will try. To my University, I wish that you could have believed that I only wanted the best for you. I don't believe that you really understood that or me. I wish it could have all been different in many ways. But, damn it, it wasn't. John W. Gardner once said 'It is a sin to let any substantial portion of students - average or brilliant - drift through college without effort, without growth and without a goal.' That is the real scandal here.

Jack Henson

Criticism is passed on to others usually more often than it is ever desired. I suppose that criticism naturally comes to those who act in ways that affect other people. The man who was never criticized probably was the man who never did anything.

Robert Kennedy once pointed out: 'Moral courage is a rarer commodity than bravery in battle or great intelligence. Few are willing to brave the disapproval of their colleagues, the wrath of their society.' Many people, regardless of their convictions, are too often afraid to act because they fear the criticism or censure of their colleagues. Many also succumb to the temptation of the easy familiar paths of personal ambition and financial success. All of us usually find ourselves at some point when we lack the courage to speak up and say what we mean, and then mean what we say. Too often we are guided by our anxieties, fears, and other hang-ups rather than being guided by our moral courage and conscience. Man becomes his own worst enemy when he lets fear and timidity guide his actions. The only man who knows victory is the man who is willing to risk defeat.

There is some good advice and maybe even consolation for some in the following statements:

'I never gave anybody hell. I just told the truth, and they thought it was hell.'

Harry S. Truman

'Nothing comes from nothing, and nothing ever will.'

'The Sound of Music', Rogers and Hammerstein.

I have several other awards I would like to present: (all in fun, of course).

The Weary Traveler Award to Dr. Herbert Wey for traveling near and far to spread the good word of Appalachian State University

The Innovation And Change Award to all education instructors who have such a relevant program.

The $1.50 Heartburn And Indigestion Award to Mr. John Welborn who accidentally ate in the ASU cafeteria.

The Jack Anderson Award to the College Democrat Club for their research on the Food Service Scandal.

The Doug Moore Award to all ASU students who ignore Dr. Wey.

The Randy Sain Award to all students who feel that four years college education is a waste but enjoy every minute of college life.

ASU is definitely not a Harvard or Yale in reputation, but the type of undergraduate education obtainable at ASU is comparable to many large universities. Some departments here have gained much recognition for their graduates. In relation to the amount of capital received by an institution, ASU has done more toward education than most schools in this state. This can be attributed to the general atmosphere and setting around ASU which has attracted many dedicated professors. The students have also played a large role in ASU's present standing as a social and educational institution. So, Keep it going!

When I left home four years ago, my father was a fool. Today I return home shocked at how much he has learned in only four short years. Degree in hand, I leave here and only yesterday realized how grossly uneducated I really am. It took four years to reach that realization, and it will take a lifetime to make up for it. Hopefully, somewhere along the way I learned more than just how to make a living. Hopefully I learned how to live. I have come and gone and nobody really noticed—but such is life. This is the way it all begins - not with a splash but a ripple.

Mike Aiken

Everyone wants to be a success in life. It is my opinion that a person who wants to succeed in life must avoid apathy and be willing to sacrifice his own free time to help other people. He must learn to benefit from not only his mistakes but also from the mistakes of others. He must learn to make quick and life-long friendships. He must never quit in his efforts to achieve his established goals. In other words, a successful person must develop an optimistic, enthusiastic and jovial attitude toward life.

Appalachian has opened many doors of experiences for me. These experiences, though, are just the beginning of what is to be expected in the future. Some words from St. Francis of Assisi have become very important to me, and will remind me of what I have learned at Appalachian.

'O, Divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console; To be understood as to understand; To be loved as to love; For it is in giving that we receive; It is in pardoning that we pardon; It is in dying that we are born to eternal life.'

Spectator (spek ta tar), n. 1. a person who looks on; onlooker; observer. 2. a person who is present at and views a spectacle, display, or the like.

They praise and they criticize. They love and they hate. Most of the time they know more than the coach, and are always able to execute a particular play better than the athletes themselves. There is a driving desire to be associated with a team, sharing the elation over a victory and suffering the disappointment that comes with a defeat. As a result, fans flock to the stadiums and gymnasiums by the hundreds, eagerly anticipating an exciting and emotionally draining game.

Appalachian fans rant and rave to each other while the Apps are on the road, but, when the Mountaineers return to Conrad Stadium or Varsity gym the people pack the arena and welcome "their" team home as conquering heroes.

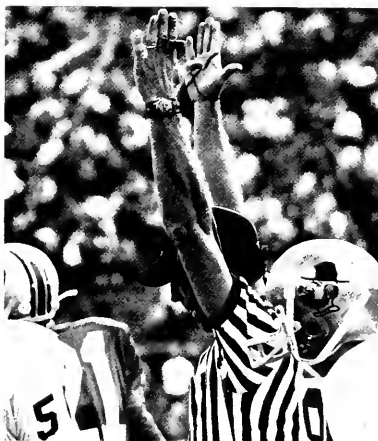

Through both the good and bad times there are always spectators present, creating an influential atmosphere which affects the performance of the individual player and team.

Here at Appalachian, the fans are rarely silent and all of the commotion at games has a definite effect, according to both coaches and players. How much of an effect depends upon the individual.

Ron Reynolds, All Southern Conference defensive tackle, said he liked his crowds "big and rowdy." "It did not really matter whether the crowd was for or against you as long as it was big and made a lot of noise." Noise was exactly what Ron had this fall. Take 5,000 emotional fans, a spirited marching band, excited cheerleaders, a devoted team and staff, and the result - one gigantic pandemonium, a state of confusion that everyone found strangely satisfying.

Even though all of this commotion was taking place some players were not consciously aware of the crowd's presence. The only time Greg Clark ever heard the crowd was after he kicked the football, then he could hear the cheers - or groans, letting him know whether or not he made the extra point.

From a coach's point of view, the spectator's presence largely influenced the player's performance. None of Press Maravitch's players had ever performed before a crowd as vocal as the one present at the North Carolina State game last November. "I called this player up to go into the game," Maravich said. "I grabbed his arm and it was cold, as if he were dead. I looked at him and he was as white as a sheet." But, of course there is always the other side of the story. The home crowds were often crucial factors in the Mountaineer's victories, especially the victory over Richmond early in the season.

John Rutt, a senior forward, was in agreement with his coach when he commented that the home crowd always helped - not only offensively but also defensively. "When you were on a scoring spree you could hear the crowd yelling and everything was going right. The shots just kept falling!"

Wrestling presented a slightly different story, since it was an individual sport. The spectator's reactions varied as each grappler took on his opponent. With a shorter time limit than most other sports, the tension and emotion quickly built to a peak, only to be released by continuous encouragement and "advice" by the attentive spectator. As Chris Jacobsen put it, "It really helped get you psyched up to have the crowd yell for you."

"Sideline sports" in themselves can be extremely violent and aggressive in nature, as was sometimes shown by both players and spectators. Indeed, many fans have reacted violently to poor performances by their team. In Latin American countries revolutions have occurred because of poorly played soccer games. But, luckily for us, here at Appalachian, we have never had to face such an extreme situation. Not to say that we have not shown spirit - cups on the gym floor, smoke bombs and bottles on the football field, a "small amount" of profane language by overly excited students, and of course chants like - "Elevator, elevator we got shaft!" - were only small examples of the fans' enthusiasms this past year at ASU.

As long as there have been sports events, and as long as man has competed against man, spectators have been on hand to voice their approval or disapproval, either alone or in a crowd.

CROSS COUNTRY

Football

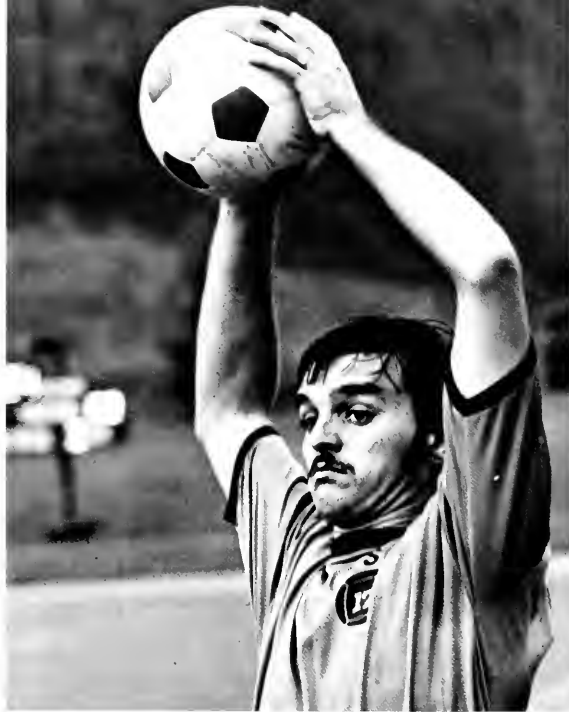

It was a season . . . a season of enthusiasm and apathy, tears and smiles, despair and happiness, mistakes and new records. It was football at ASU.

Soccer

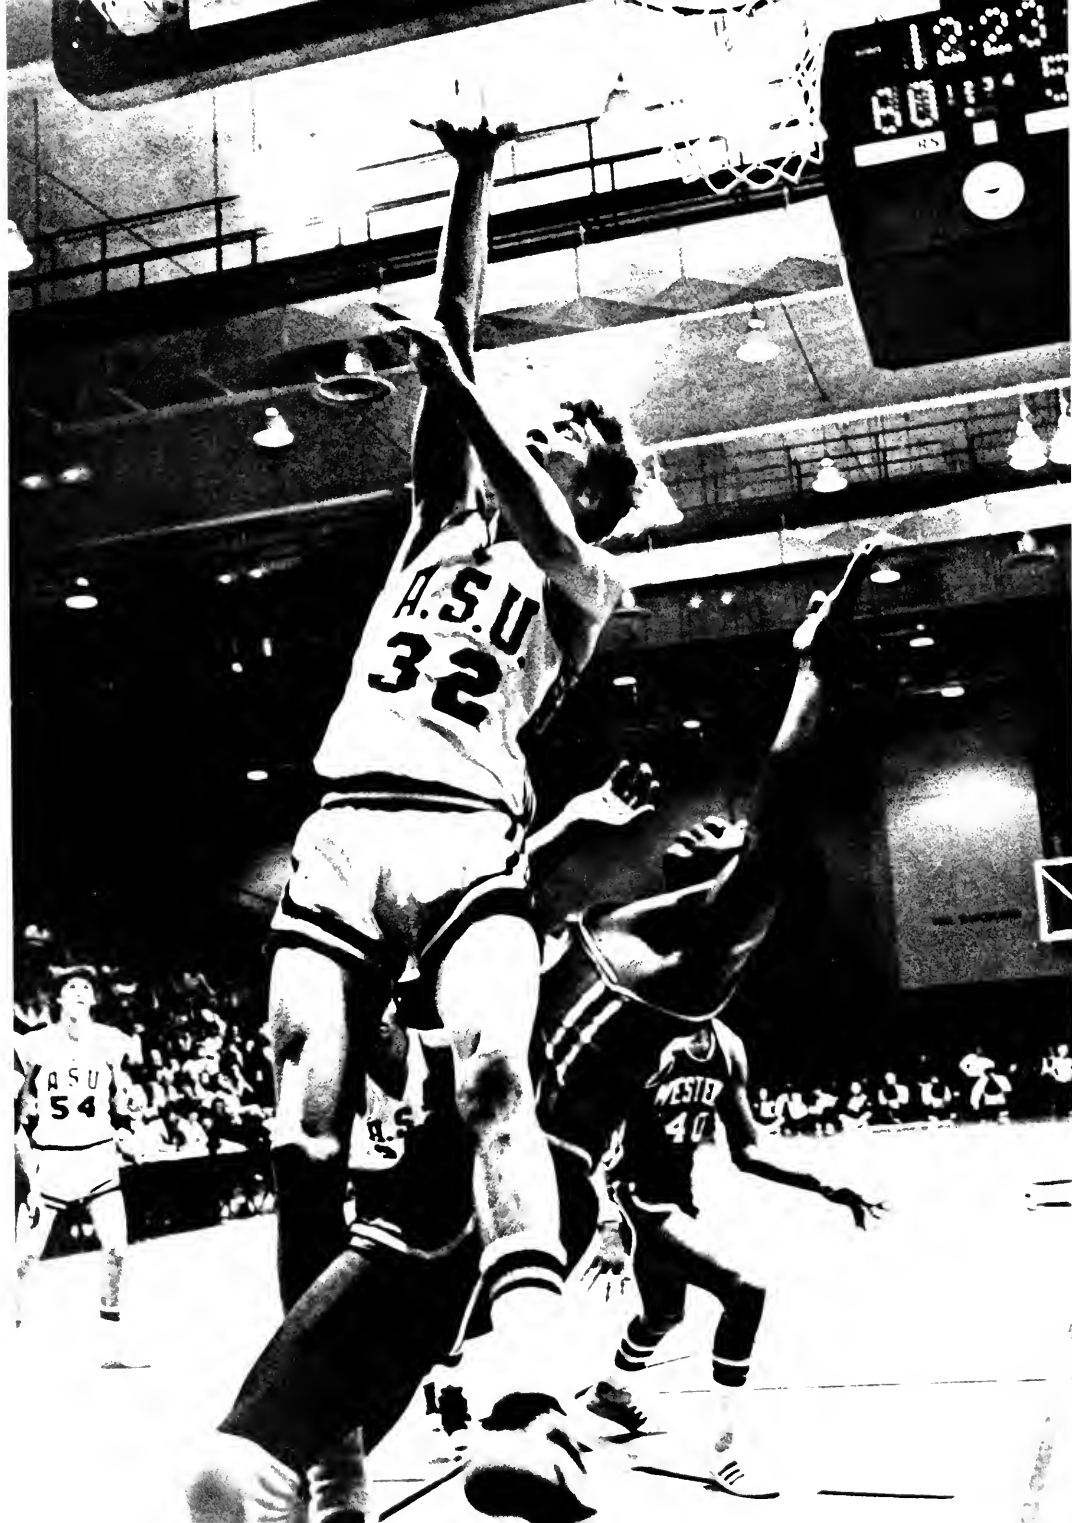

Dedication . . . drive . . . enthusiasm . . . over 300 miles of running . . . the perfect ingredients needed to capture the Southern Conference Championship and the Southern Conference Most Valuable Player title.

BASKETBALL

A new season, new conference, new coach all contributed to the joys and disappointments of the 1972-73 basketball team . . . a year where Press Maravich probably faced his biggest challenge . . . a year of close wins and close losses.

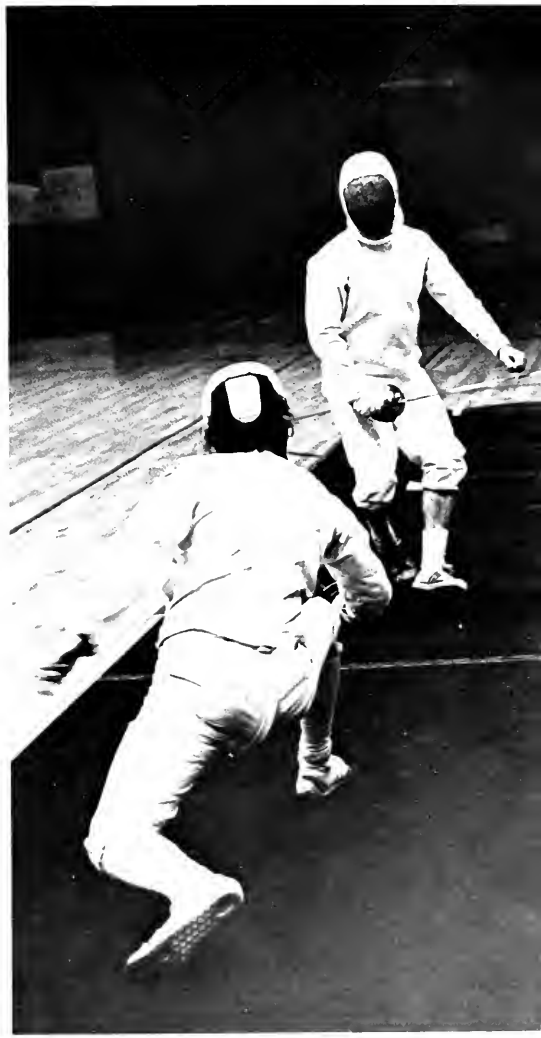

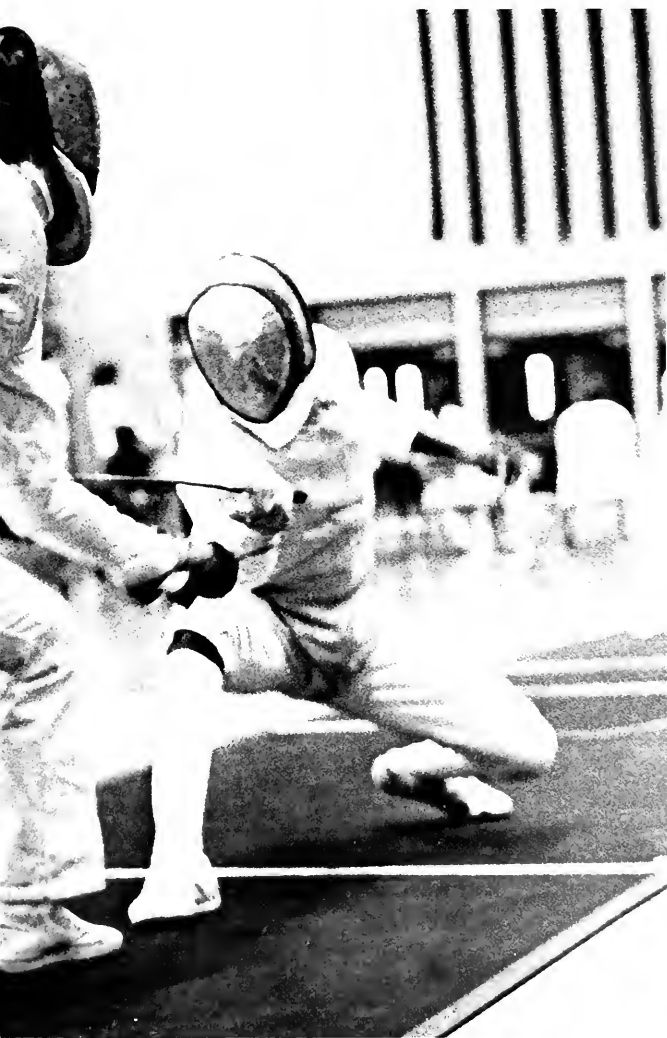

Epee squad . . .
Sabre squad . . .
Foil squad . . .

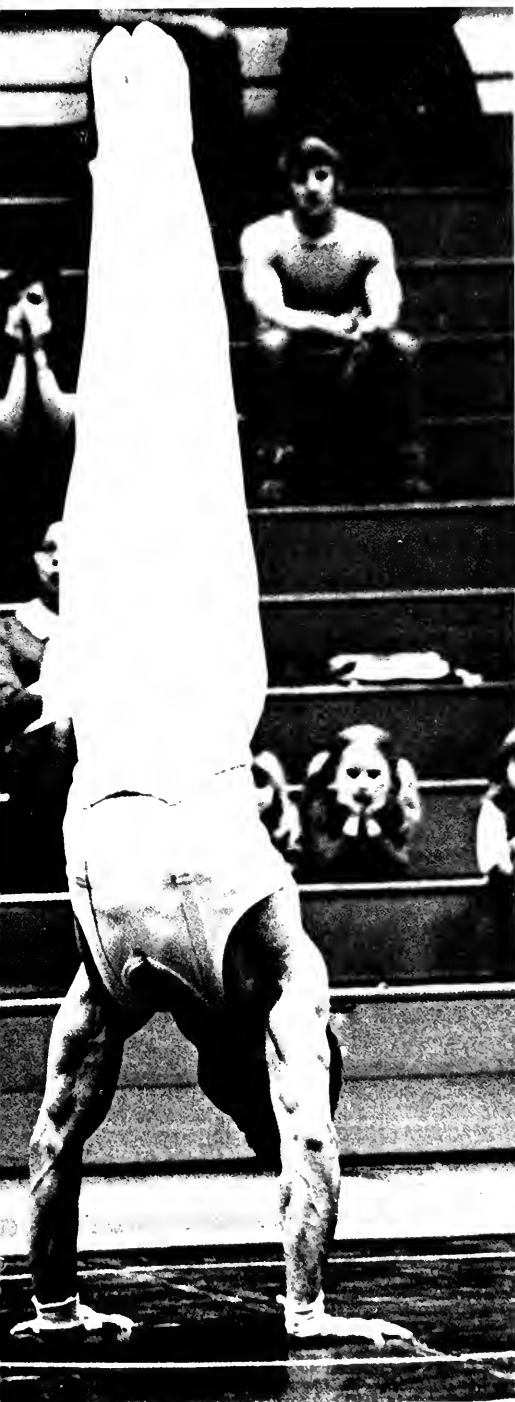

FENCING

GYMNASTICS

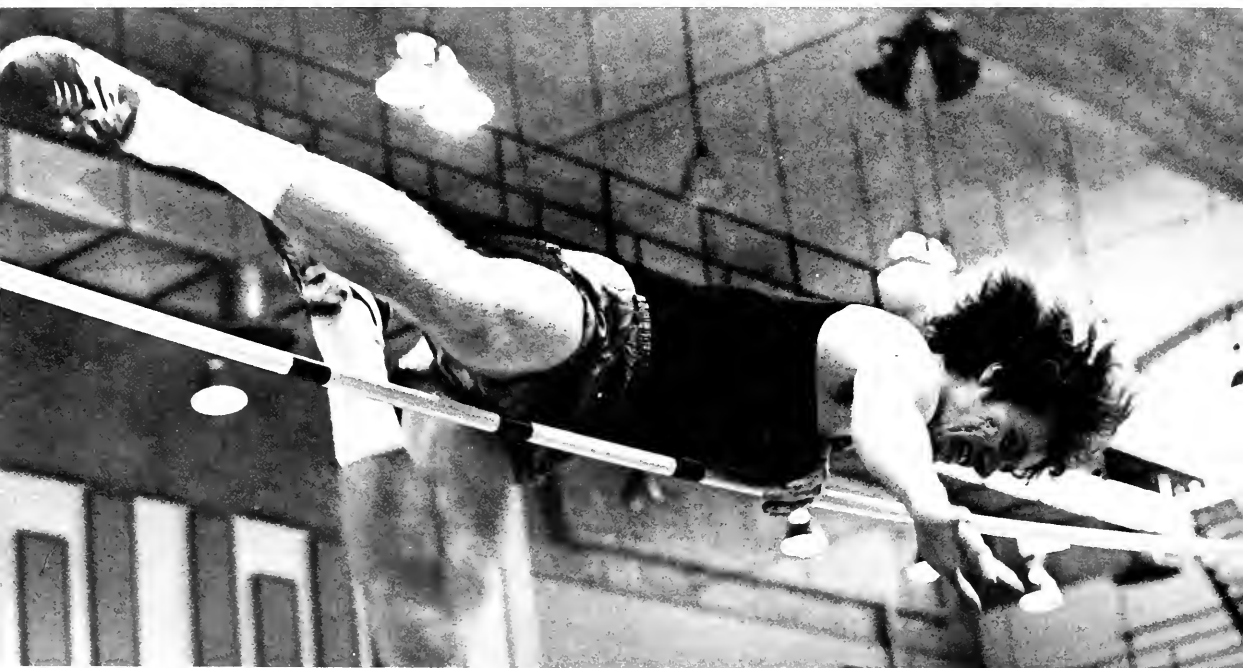

Gymnastics . . . a sport and an art where motion yields beauty.

Track being brought indoors . . . a new aspect in sports that attracted curious onlookers and proved itself to be successful.

INDOOR TRACK

A brand new team . . . a first in the history of ASU . .
. . a team that began its own history with a winning season.

MARKSMANSHIP

SWIMMING

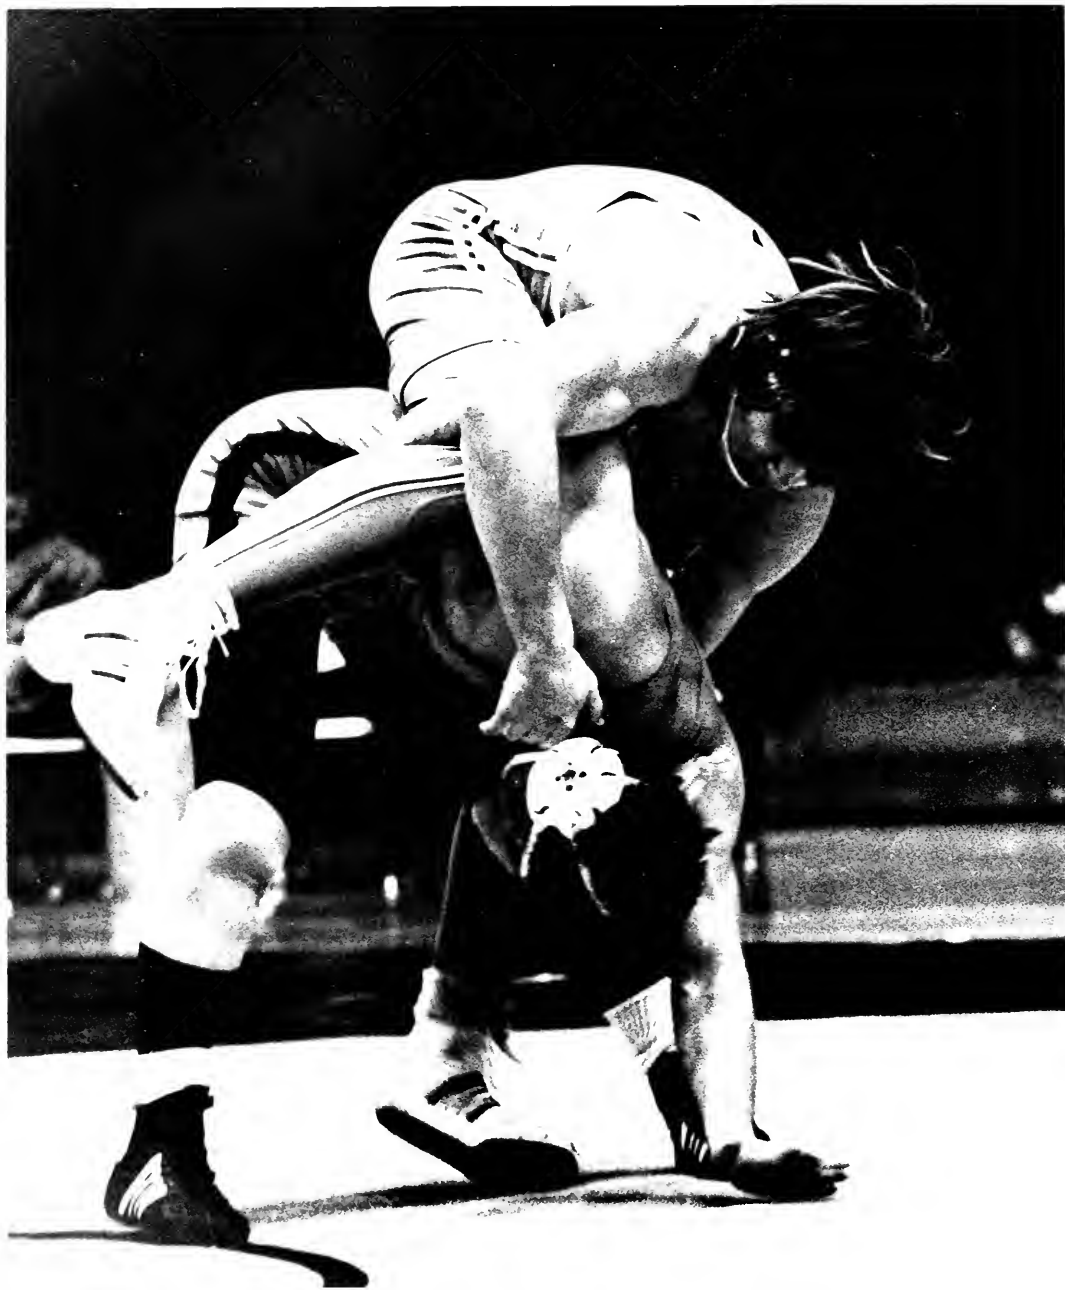

Though lack of "depth" on the team presented a problem, it did not stop these men or lessen their spirits. Aided by the divers they completed the season with a 6-7 record.

WRESTLING

With winter came wrestling and once again excitement and tense moments captivated everyone present, as the grapplers displayed their strength, agility and emotions.

TRACK

These Lady Apps proved themselves successful this season, after long hours of practice and stiff competition, by having seven women selected for the All-Deep South Team.

FIELD HOCKEY

Volleyball - one of the few varsity sports in which ASU men can not compete in intercollegiately. . . a game of alertness and sharing.

BASKETBALL

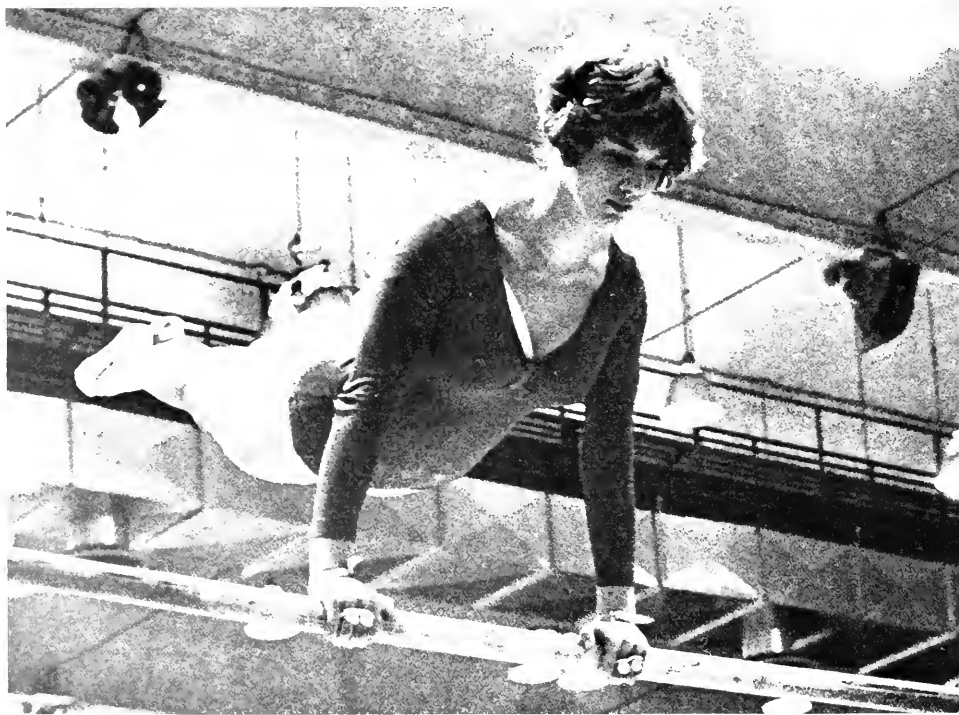

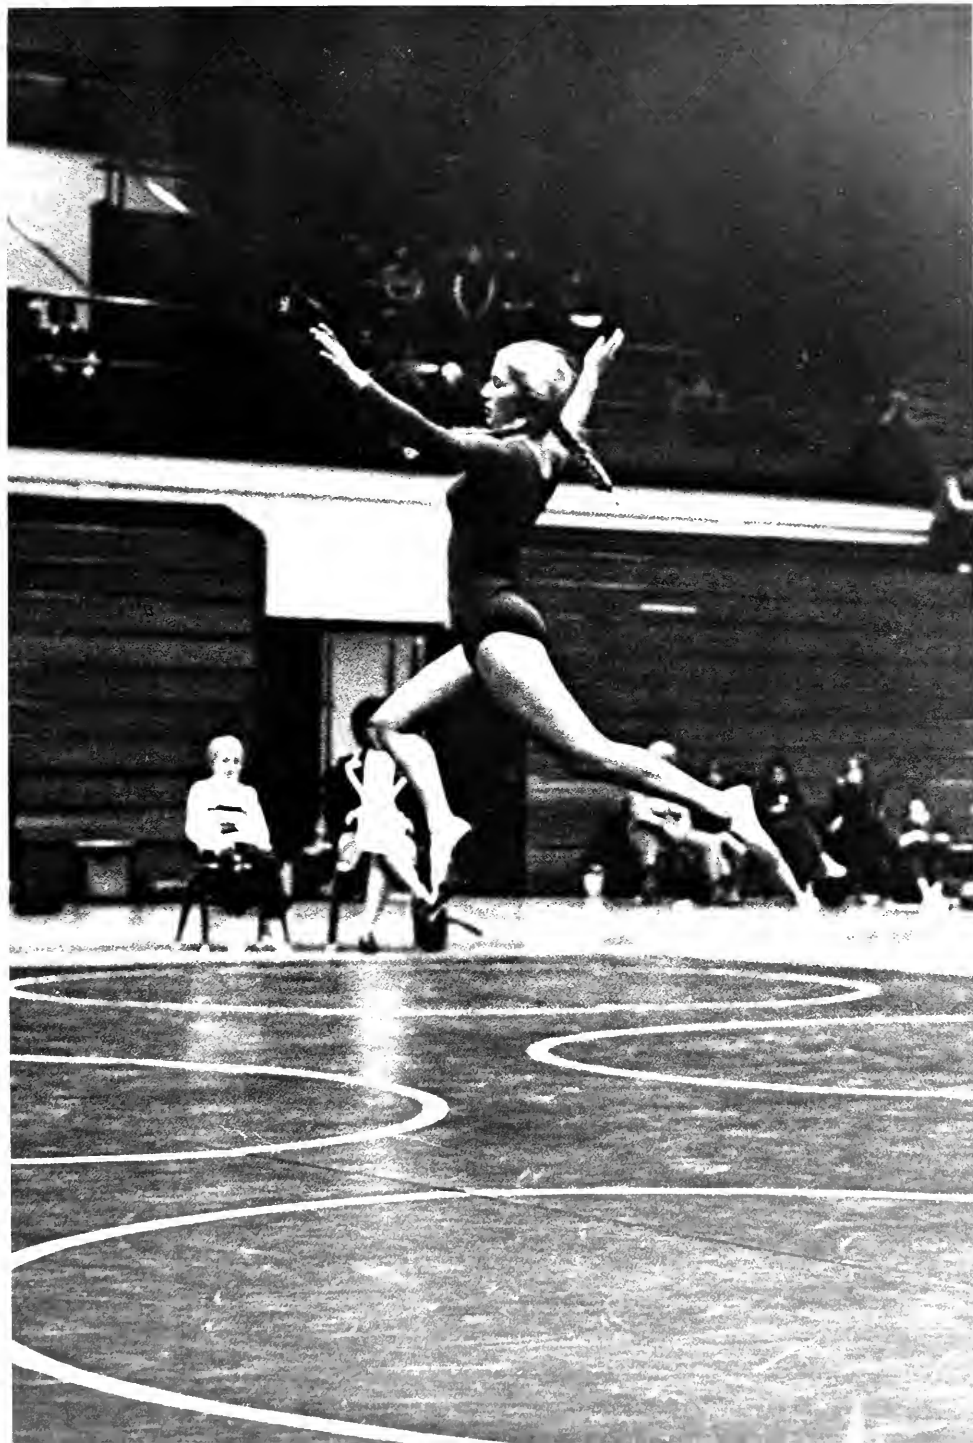

Women's sports at ASU have been growing steadily and the 1972-73 Basketball team was no exception. These Lady Apps made quite a showing this year, finalized by a winning season.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

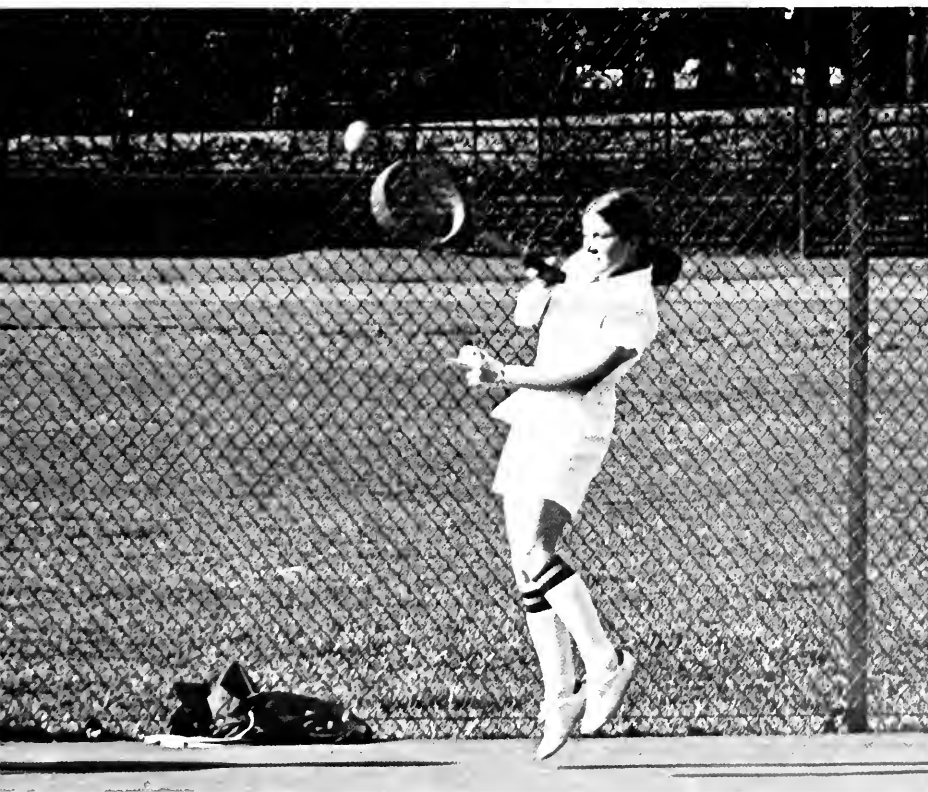

The women swimmers worked diligently all season, both in the pool and out, as a team and individually, offering their services as timers and scorekeepers whenever they were not swimming themselves.

"run for the turkey"

From spectator to participant . . . This is the goal of the newly structured intramural department headed by Dr. Wayne Edwards. The program has grown tremendously this year, involving several thousand students in nineteen different sports. New opportunities have opened for both men and women to experience the feelings of active participation in addition to observing. Through friendly rivalry of the teams, spirit and unity have been revived on the ASU campus.
